

Germantown Police Saturday were somehow unable to run down the driver of a Chevrolet Aveo, one of the slowest cars in production, with a rated horsepower of only 108 and a top speed of a mere 87 miles per hour. Fox 6 reports Germantown officers lost sight of the vehicle and abandoned their pursuit even though the driver aimed his vehicle at a squad car and tried to strike it after he and an accomplice robbed a store using force.

Police now say they believe the two men involved in the robbery at the vapor store on Mequon Road in Germantown may be involved in a number of other area robberies. Even though the robbery in question appears to be a felony and the driver attempted to strike the officers with his car, police gave up on attempting to catch the suspects getting away in one of the slowest cars currently made.
