Write-In Votes

Earl Gillespie (Braves announcer)

Lou Perini (Braves Owner; brought baseball to Milwaukee)

The following are already in:

Hank Aaron, Rollie Fingers, Paul Molitor, Bud Selig, Robin Yount, Cecil Cooper, Harry Dalton, Bob Uecker, Jim Gantner, Gorman Thomas, Harvey Kuenn, Don Money, Eddie Mathews, John Quinn, Warren Spahn, Lew Burdette, Johnny Logan, Teddy Higuera, Joe Adcock. Geoff Jenkins.

My reasons:

Augie has been part of the Brewers organization in one way or another for 44 years

Caldwell went 79-48 over five seasons from 1978-82 (averaged 16 wins per year) and won 10-2 games in his Brewers career

Slaton is the team's all-time leader in wins, innings and complete game shutouts (19!)

Vuckovich won the Cy Young Award in 1982 and went 32-10 in the Brewers playoff seasons of 1981 and 1982 (His omission is a disgrace)

Buhl won 109 games for the Brewers and went 18-6 in Milwaukee's only world championship season, 1957

Haney is the only manager to win a World Series in Milwaukee and won back to back NL pennants here

With virtually no games on TV, Earl was the eyes and ears for Braves fans during the 1950s glory era and was a Milwaukee legend

If Perini doesn't move the Braves here from Boston, we might never have gotten a team
